When I was seven, I wanted to be a vet. I used to make my baby brother Darren pretend he was a dog so I could treat him for an injury or some sickness. I had lots of teddy bears that invariably ended up with bandaged limbs or some tropical disease from Jamaica that needed to be treated. For my birthday, my dad bought me a rabbit. We built a hutch together in the back garden and made a run for her. I called her Matilda. She was gorgeous. Every day, I spent hours in the back garden playing with Matilda. I was so possessive of her that I didn't even let Darren go near her.
